The Jewett Family of America Quarterly

1997

Nos. 1 and 2

Introduction to the Quarterly Publication

This is the first publication of the new Quarterly format for the Jewett Family of America. It is the renewal of a tradition from the 1950's. As explained in the September 1996 Newsletter, the decision was made by the Board of Directors to adopt the Quarterly format. This was done at the request of Historian and Editor of Publications Lee Jewett Petry who presented sample copies of a proposed Quarterly at the National Reunion in July 1996 for comment from those in attendance.

The material published in Volumes III and IV of the History and Genealogy of the Jewetts of America was gathered from the questionnaires sent out to members of the Jewett Family of America in 1990. In a few cases additional information was taken from the supplemental files kept by then Historian Edna Jewett. However, there are hundreds of pages of additional information which have been submitted to the Jewett Family of America over the years. This information was placed in supplemental files with the understanding that it would be included in future volumes of the History and Genealogy of the Jewetts of America. However, this information was not included in Volumes III and IV thus leaving many lines incomplete or, worse yet, neglected altogether.

The decision to adopt a Quarterly format for Jewett Family of America publications will make it possible to include this supplemental information in addition to the material which has been published in the Newsletters and Yearbooks for the last several years. Please read the Quarterly carefully keeping in mind the purpose for which it has been developed. Your comments and suggestions are invited and should be addressed to Lee Jewett Petry, 209 Marchmont Road, Knoxville TN 37923.

Additions and Corrections to Volumes III and IV

Many of the entries in Volumes III and IV of the History and Genealogy of the Jewetts of America are incomplete. These entries should be reviewed and missing information reported. Although some missing information has been received for inclusion in the Errata scheduled for publication at the end of 1997, there are still many events (i.e, births, marriages, deaths) with no names, dates or places. Much of this missing information involves people still living who can be contacted directly to complete their Jewett lines.

Please take the time and effort to contact your family members and ask them to help in this important project. This is the time to connect with that cousin who lives a thousand miles away or the aunt that you remember with affection from your childhood. It is also the time to sit down with the senior members of your line and talk to them about "the old days" and to collect from them the stories about your ancestors. It is so easy for this knowledge to slip away from us because we are "too busy" or "too impatient" to take the time to listen.

One of the greatest gifts you can give the younger members of your family is an appreciation and interest in his or her history and heritage. With the technology available today, the collection and recording of family history can be done easily by younger members of the family using audio tapes, video tapes, and computers. All of these are readily available and familiar to our younger generations.

The use of computers for genealogy is growing by leaps and bounds, and classes are available in many senior centers to help in gaining familiarity with the various programs on the market as well as the wealth of genealogical information to be found on the internet. Expand your horizons and pass the information on to the Jewett Family of America.

Henry Clay Jewett

By BG Richard Lee Jewett (21288)

A biography of Henry Clay Jewett (8617) was published in the Jewett Family of America 1966 Yearbook on pages 35-38. The account ended with "Note: Under a special act of Congress, the posthumous rank of Brigadier General was conveyed to Henry Clay Jewett." This article gives the history of the special act of Congress authorizing that posthumous promotion.

During World War I authority to promote military personnel up to the grade of colonel in the American Expeditionary Forces (AEF) in Europe was granted to the Commander-in-Chief of the AEF, General John J. Pershing, West Point Class of 1886. All promotions in the grades of general were made by the War Department in Washington based on recommendations from General Pershing. Since the two most important campaigns fought by the AEF were the St. Mihiel offensive fought 12-16 Sep 1918 and the Meuse-Argonne offensive begun on 26 Sep 1918 and still in process at the time of the armistice on 11 Nov 1918, the final battles were so compressed that time did not permit many promotions to general during the final weeks, especially since no advancements to star rank were made after the armistice. It might be noted in passing that essentially the same promotion procedures were used in World War II.

After World War I several bills were introduced in Congress to promote officers to grades for which they had been recommended by division commanders or coordinate or higher authority during the war. Of these bills the only one passed by Congress and signed into law during the 1920's or the 1930's was in 1930. This bill provided that officers who had held a higher temporary rank during the war than the lower permanent rank to which they reverted after the war in the downsizing of the army could retire at the highest temporary rank they had held.

Finally in the 76th Congress in 1939 a bill was introduced to provide that any commissioned officer of the Army below the grade of brigadier general who had retired and who for services rendered during the World War was officially recommended in writing for increased rank by a division commander or coordinate or higher authority or by the chief of a staff corps or department, and who had not attained said rank, and who as evidenced by bestowal of the Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in action beyond the call of duty or the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious service should, upon application, be advanced one grade on the retired list but without increase of pay or allowances. A proviso was also included to cover those officers who had died before the approval of the Act or those on the active list who might die before retirement when application was made on their behalf.

When queried about this bill, both active duty and retired generals and colonels supported this legislation as a fine tribute for duty exceptionally well performed. Hearings on the bill were begun in March 1940 and after passage by the Congress, the President approved it on 13 Jun 1940 as Public Law 76-614.

Since Henry Clay Jewett met the criteria established by the act, application on his behalf was made to the War Department and the announcement of his posthumous promotion to brigadier general was published in the Evening News in North Tonawanda NY, a suburb of his home town of Buffalo, on 25 Oct 1940.

In researching this article several interesting situations were discovered. The officer who assumed command of the 316th Engineer Regiment, 91st Division, when Colonel Henry Clay Jewett was assigned to command the 182nd Infantry Brigade was Colonel George Rodman Goethals, West Point Class of 1908. He was the son of Major General George Washington Goethals, West Point Class of 1880, who as a colonel built the Panama Canal, 1907-1914.

One other officer who was promoted to brigadier general under the authority of this act was William Augustus Mitchell who graduated first in the West Point Class of 1902. During World War I he commanded the 2nd Engineer Regiment of the 2nd Division, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and was recommended three times for promotion to brigadier general. Cadets at West Point during the 1920's and 1930's recognize his name for he served there as Head of the Department of Engineering and Military Art from 1922 to 1938.

Only two Jewetts have graduated from West Point, Henry Clay Jewett (8617) Class of 1901 and Richard Lee Jewett (21288) Class of 1931 who attained the rank of brigadier general while on active duty in 1959, two years before his retirement, at Fort Sheridan IL. Richard Lee Jewett's father, Frank Fanning Jewett (7217), and Henry Clay Jewett are both Tenth Generation Jewett descendants of Joseph Jewett (4). In an unusual and surprising coincidence, Frank Fanning Jewett graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1901, the same year that Henry Clay Jewett graduated from West Point. Frank Fanning Jewett served 34 years in the regular army in the infantry. During his career he served in the Phillipines, the State of Washington, southwest United States, in France during World War I and with American Graves Registration Service after the War, and numerous posts in the United States until his retirement in 1936.

Leone Oxford Recalls 90 Years

By Pat Hansen, Tri-County Proud, Issue 17, 24 Jan 1997
(Western Shopper of weekly Powell County, Deer Lodge, MT)

"Live life day to day, make the best of it, and enjoy it!" is the philosophy of Leone (Jewett) Oxford (15453), of Ovando MT, who recently celebrated her 90th birthday.

This wisp of a lady, with a sparkle in her eye, and a bit of wanderlust in her soul, has a passion for living life to its fullest. Although not as steady on her feet as in the past, she nevertheless lives an active life. Leone raises African violets, does beautiful beadwork, which she sells, and enjoys crocheting, when she isn't out with her daughters and sons-in-law helping with work on the ranch. "She really keeps us on our toes," laughed her daughter, Norma Hughes. During the summer months Leone works in her lovely yard, planting and caring for her flowers. She also chops her own pitch for starting fires in her wood stove and carries in much of the firewood needed as the days grow colder. Leone also has fascinating collections of owls and stamps.

Drive down the meandering, forest bordered lane and shortly you arrive at the tidy, rustic ranch nestled near the foot of the mountain. One's first impression is that you may have arrived on a Western movie set. The cozy log homes of Leone and her daughter and son-in-law, Irene and John Weaver, are made of logs standing vertically, rather than the customary horizontal style. Quaking aspen, whose last golden leaves tremble in the autumn wind, and the hunter green of the evergreens frame the ranch setting.

Leone loves this home which has been hers since 1948. Born in Lincoln NE on 19 Oct 1905 she was the first child of her parents, Dexter (15431) and Alice (Blanchard) Jewett, to survive birth. The family lived on a farm, and after two babies were stillborn at home, her parents decided she would be born in the hospital, which was ten miles from home. She had two brothers; Perry (15454) died when he was three years old after a mule kicked him. Her older brother, Ned (15455), lives in Lincoln NE but still owns the family's home place. The family home still remains and is listed on the historical register. It is the site of an Old Timbers Threshing Bee and other activities held each year in July during a Heritage Days celebration.

It would be safe to assume that Leone's urge to travel was inherited from her father who was always wanting to see what was over the next hill, so to speak.

The government opened the territory near Glasgow MT to homesteading in 1915. In the spring of 1917, Dexter came to Montana "to see what it was like." He purchased a relinquishment on a homestead northwest of Glasgow, in the hinterlands just 1 3/4 miles from the Canadian line. He returned to Nebraska and in late May brought his family to Montana on the train. They had an old Ford, a cow, a few pieces of farm machinery and their household goods which were loaded into a box car called an Immigrant car. The family lived in the car during the trip to their new home. Located on a high plains prairie, their new home consisted of a 10 foot by 12 foot tarpaper shack which was wired down at each corner to keep the wind from blowing it away. There was also a small, part-sod barn, and a team of horses that had come with the homestead.

Normally, a person had to 'prove up' on a homestead in four years, but because Dexter was a Spanish American War veteran and had purchased a relinquishment, they did not have to live on the homestead all the time. When winter came, the family moved into the small town if Hinsdale, and Dexter went to work in the General Mercantile. Each summer, Leone, her mother and brother would do work out on the homestead, while her father worked at the Mercantile.

She recalled how the roads turned to gumbo after a rain. She told of how her mother would 'herd' the old Ford through mud so thick it would accumulate on the wheels until it was jammed against the fender, and the harrowing experience of fording the creeks when "we sometimes didn't know if we would make it." "Fixing a flat in those days was no snap either. You had to take the rim off the wheel, then take the tire off the rim, patch the tube and replace the rim and wheel," she said.

Hinsdale was a water stop for the steam engines on the railroad, and many of the trains coming through in 1917 and 1918 were troop trains. "When the troop trains came in, we would all go down and hand out sandwiches, cookies and donuts we had made. I learned to knit and made sweaters and wash cloths for the soldiers," Leone recalled.

"Dad loved to meander and see new places," Leone stated. In 1918, he wanted to see new places to the west. Travel was unlike what we are accustomed to today, and there were no motels. The family would load up the Ford. A bedding roll, wrapped in the tent canvas, was tied to the back of the car. The mattress tick, which was their bed, would be filled with hay, straw or corn husks when they camped for the night. A wooden cupboard was attached to the left side of the vehicle, and the collapsible tent frame was fastened to the running board. Leone recalled that as a youngster they camped in mud and rain, as well as during good weather, wherever they would travel.

There were no paved roads and travel was slow, even slower when they came to hills because they had to back up the before continuing to go on. Leone explained that the gas tank was under the front seat and gravity flow fueled the carburetor. When you tried to drive up hill forward, there was no gravity flow.

"It rained cats and dogs and when we got to Lincoln the big hotel looked like heaven. We didn't camp out that night! The old road from Lincoln to Ovando was a 'beaner of a road' with two hills which we had to back up with the old Ford, and my brother and I pushed. Later Dad drilled a hole in the gas tank and installed a valve system that could be pumped up with a tire pump to force gas into the carburetor. Each time we came to a hill, he would jump out, pump up the valve and then we would drive over the hill! It sure beat pushing!' she said.

In 1918, the family traveled to Kalispell via Missoula. "There wasn't much in Missoula in those days," Leone recalled. Arriving at Poulson, they took a ferry boat to Sommers since there were no roads on either side of the Lake.

Leone attended eighth grade in Kalispell, and remembers how terrible it was when so many people became ill and died during the Spanish influenza epidemic. However, no one in her family became ill at that time.

For several years the family traveled back to Hinsdale to work on the homestead during the summer, but each fall would find them settling in other places including Hilyard near Spokane, Oregon where her grandfather lived; and back to Nebraska where Leone finished high school in 1923.

She attended one year at Nebraska State University before the family moved to Missoula in 1924. They lived on the South side, and two years later she met the man who would become her husband, Charles Oxford. Thinking back to Missoula in those days, Leone notes that only two businesses remain in the uptown district which were there in 1924 - Claude Elder's Office Supply and the Missoula Laundry. At that time, Higgins Ave. was brick rather than pavement.

Her brother, Ned, graduated from Missoula County High School (Hellgate High) and in 1926 the family returned to Nebraska.

In 1928 Chuck traveled to Nebraska to take Leone as his bride. They were married 3 Jun 1928 in a double wedding with her cousin at the Lutheran Church in Eagle NE. Chuck had a Model T coupe which they drove back to Montana on their honeymoon.

Chuck worked as a maintenance man for the Streetcar company in Missoula during the summer and worked for the Fuel and Transfer during the winter months. Leone recalls with a bit of melancholy that the streetcars, which were owned by W.A. Clark, were discontinued in 1933 and the lines were taken up. "All the street car motormen are gone now. There were 20-25 of them, including my brother-in-law...," she said.

The couple lived on the south side of Missoula for a time, but soon had an opportunity to buy a place near Turah which had been Chuck's mother and step-father's. Chuck commuted to Missoula each day to work, but they paid for the place by cutting and selling cordwood. While living there, Leone drove the school bus, a converted van, for eight years to the school in Bonner. At a time when most girls did not learn to drive, Leone had learned as a senior in high school. By this time their family had grown to include two daughters, Norma (15493) and Irene (15494).

In 1945 the family moved to Piltzville, near Bonner and then to Nimrod. By chance, in 1948, they found the 280 acre place she calls home. They moved here in February 1948. "When we came there was nothing here. Chuck and Ed Geary set to work cutting timber, and built a barn to shelter the 13 cows we were milking at the time. Three tents were set up for housekeeping - one we lived in, one was for the girls when they came home from high school on weekends, and the third was storage. We had a little Navy surplus 5000 watt light plant, so we had lights and an electric separator for the milk." Leone said. Their cream was sold to the Deer Lodge Creamery and was hauled on the 'stage' by Mugs Norton, the mailman.

Their first summer they built a house, cutting and peeling the logs and doing the construction. The house was roofed with Tamarack shakes. Irene and John now live in the original home.

In the fall, the girls attended high school in Drummond. Norma was injured in a playground accident during her first year of grade school, and because of the extensive medical care she needed, was unable to continue in school that year. She and Irene started school together the next year and continued in the same grade throughout their education. While going to high school they lived in a little house behind the Weaver Cafe (D&M). The girls worked at the cafe after school during the week, and when the roads permitted, returned to the ranch on weekends. "Those first few winters were pretty tough," Leone admitted.

As hard as the work was, the family had good times too. Each fall, after the summer work was completed. the family would pack in to the South Fork in the Bob Marshall Wilderness, and spend two weeks during September camping and hunting...

Chuck worked in the timber industry and was skilled as a sawyer, at the sawmill, and hauling logs. In 1958 they built another log home on the ranch. This is Leone's home.

After he retired, Chuck and Leone enjoyed traveling throughout the country. Each spring and fall would find them making a trip to Miles City and east to Terry where they would hunt for agates. Later Chuck would polish the stones and Leone would set them in jewelry. They had great times digging for bottles, before the old dumps were closed... "We went to all the old mining towns, but mostly we dug in Anaconda, where the new golf course is going to be, and in Helena." They had been married 44 years when Chuck died in 1972.

"I'm glad I've lived when I have. Young people may call me a fuddy duddy, but there are so many things happening these days which go against the grain. There is so much permissiveness in the younger generations. There is a deterioration of self-respect, in dress and in morals these days. I know what it has been, and it's been good," Leone stated.

"We had the best parents in the world," Norma and Irene said. "There was lots of discipline, but a lot of love with it. They taught us how to work, and even now we love to work."

Irene and John ranch on the home place where they raise beef cattle, primarily Hereford/Simmental cross. Norma and her husband, Charley Hughes, live just up the road where they too are ranchers, raising Shorthorn/ Red Angus cattle.

Two years ago Leone attended her 70th high school class reunion in Waverly NE. Norma, Irene, her granddaughter and her two great grandchildren accompanied Leone on the trip. While there they had a good time seeing the places where she grew up. At the time of this interview, Leone was looking forward to the birth of another great grandchild and visiting with her granddaughter and family in eastern Montana.

Announcements

The 1997 Board Meeting of the Jewett Family of America, Inc. will be held the weekend of September 27-28 in Tenafly NJ. Further details will be announced at a later date.

Queries

The Jewett Family of America is seeking information on the following:

Charles Henry Jewett. Born 4 Jan 1840 in Hyde Park, Lamoille, VT. Died 7 Jan 1840 in Bruneau, Owyhee, ID. Married first Mary C. Smith. Married second Lucinda/Luella/Ella Mae Yates. Who were Charles's ancestors?

We have connected two descendants of William Jewett. Born 1795, place unknown, maybe VT. Married Nancy Willson/Wilson 20 Jan 1810 in Scioto Co. OH. We are still searching for his ancestors?

Genealogical Information

Note from Historian Lee Jewett Petry: Information about the births, marriages and deaths reported on this page were received after the 1996 Yearbook was published. Many others have been received in conjunction with additions and corrections made for members of the Clusters published in Volumes III and IV; these will appear in the Errata planned for publication in late 1997. Corrections and additions for the Errata will be confined to those individuals who are listed and numbered in Volumes III and IV and events associated with those individuals only. Extensive material which has been received fills in many already printed Clusters but adds new individuals not listed in Volumes III and IV. That material will be put into manuscript form for future publication both in the Quarterlies and in future volumes of the History and Genealogy of the Jewetts of America.

Births

Correction to entry in 1996 Yearbook: P. 25, Christine Elizabeth Jewett, daughter of Dorian Barstow (Turk) and Charles William Jewett, was born 25 Jan 1995 in San Jose CA.

Clifford Jewett Swift was an embodiment of Henry Grady's generation and the great Georgia editor's dreams of an industrialized South. Mr. Grady was at the height of his journalistic achievements the year Mr. Swift was born in 1882. Already he had become known as the South's prophet with his warning that the section must industrialize. Mr. Grady had been removed from the southern scene more than a decade when Mr. Swift entered the cotton manufacturing business. Mr. Swift's outstanding civic and business accomplishments here parallel the path the Georgia editor marked out for the agrarian South's future.

Mr. Swift's early education was typical of the times and the system. He graduated from Bellvue High School in Virginia and completed a two-year course in cotton manufacturing at Philadelphia. He began his career at Muscogee Manufacturing Co., and other textile mills here in 1902, and in 1907, helped organize and became vice president and general manager of the Swift Spinning Mills, serving in that capacity for 16 years. In 1950, he was named chairman of the board, a post he held until his death.

He played an important part in the growth and success of the Cotton Manufacturers Association of Georgia, having served as a member of the executive committee from 1914-1915; as a director from 1923-1928 and as president from 1929-1930.

Among his civic accomplishments, Mr. Swift was known for his interest in and outstanding work with the early organization of City Hospital. He served continuously on the City Hospital Board of Managers from 1914 until 1945, and was a member of the original board of St. Francis Hospital.

Another outstanding industrial civic leader, who also embodied the personality and characteristics of the Old South, has been removed from our midst.[4]

Sarah Orne Jewett Resurgence

There has been a renewed interest in the writings of Sarah Orne Jewett over the last several years. 1996 marked 100 years since publication of The County of the Pointed Firs. A Library of America edition of her writings has been published by Literary Classics of the United States, 14 East 60th Street, New York NY 10022. This edition includes short stories as well as the novels The Country of the Pointed Firs and A Country Doctor.

Warning!
Good and Bad Sources of Information

Note from Historian Lee Jewett Petry:

We have mentioned in past yearbooks that there are companies in the business of providing so-called "Jewett Family Histories" and "Jewett Family Newsletters". I recently requested a sample copy of "The Jewett Family News and Family Bulletin Board" from 1181 S. Parker Rd. #105, Denver CO 80231. They would not provide a sample copy (which is unusual since legitimate family groups are always eager to find new family members and ordinarily will provide a sample copy of their family publications). I sent them $3.00 for a single copy and after a post card nudge received the publication. It was a 28-page booklet with a great deal of generic information not specific to Jewetts as well as many advertisements which were mostly requests for information or offers to sell you their other publications. There were a few lists of Jewetts taken from birth and death records in their database. At $3.00 a copy and $12 for one year, it is an expensive way to gain little insight into Jewett family history.

The same company publishes a paperback 8½ x 11" book titled Three Centuries of Jewetts with a Veterans Database containing four names, a four page Marriage Database, an incomplete Census Database, and a Jewett Family Residence Database which was probably taken from phone listings.
