All Life Members are responsible for sending $5.00 for the Quarterlies Subscription each year. The Membership is indeed Lifetime, but the Quarterlies require a yearly fee. If you do not send the $5.00, we will assume that you do not want the Quarterlies. We will keep you listed as a Life Member but will no longer mail Quarterlies to you.

Note from the Historian

Please be sure to include complete information when you submit birth, marriage and death information. This means that you need to list the complete name, the Jewett connection (if known), the date of the event, and the place of the event (including the county). For a birth, include the parents' names. For a marriage, include the birth information and parents' names for both bride and groom. For a death, please include the place of burial. A form was included in the 1997 Quarterly, No. 3 which may be duplicated and used for submitting genealogy information.

Jewett National Reunion

Planning for the Jewett National Reunion to be held in August 2000 will soon be getting under way. It will take a lot of prior planning and assistance from Jewett Family of America members. We need to know what you would like to do during the reunion itself and what sort of information you would like to have to assist in planning your trip to Rowley as well as accomodations and things of interest in the Rowley area. Please send your comments, questions and suggestions to President Dorothy Jewett Brigham, PO Box 600, Acton ME 04001.

Early Vital Records

The Jewett Family of America has purchased the Early Vital Records of Essex County, Massachusetts, to about 1850 on CD-ROM. This includes, of course, records from Rowley. There are hundreds of Jewetts listed. Anyone desiring information on what is in the vital records on this CD-ROM should contact Historian Lee Jewett Petry, 209 Marchmont Road, Knoxville TN 37923.

Letter from the President

Greetings!

Glad winter has passed us by and hope everyone fared the winter. Happy Spring! When you receive this Quarterly, I shall have returned home from Washington DC where I attended the 108th Continental Congress for the DAR. On 1 Nov 1998 DAR members and guests gathered for a meeting of the Brig. Gen. James Brickett Chapter of Haverhill MA. It was nice to see so many attending this High Tea. I found it quite impressive. Gregory Laing, special collections curator, collected artifacts and memorabilia from DAR members all over Massachusetts. The Haverhill Library has an extensive Genealogy Collection to which the Jewett Family of America, Inc. donated Volumes III and IV of the History and Genealogy of the Jewetts of America. I also found out that Mr. Laing is a Jewett and an interesting one at that. Since the Ipswich Library has added a wing this past year, it has more room for the artifacts of the DAR Agawam Chapter. A Bicentennial Quilt that I had headed back in 1975 and which was created by many of the Ipswich and Rowley gals has found a home there and looks nice. The quilt has an applique of Capt. Moses Jewett's house in Ipswich Village. He is my patriot ancestor.

Every year in January, our ambitious treasurer, Ted Loranz, sends out the dues notices. For those who are Life members, this is only $5.00 per year to pay for the publications and postage. Lee and Ted are putting much of their time into the Jewett Family of America, Inc. Wouldn't it be nice to have a 100 % return to show them how much you care. It's a small price to pay even for annual members. Wouldn't you like to know what is going to be planned for next year? Good things and a fun time at the National Reunion! The Rowley Historical Society and the Jewett Family of America, Inc. are working together on this; so we can have some of the planned activities together.

Thank you for the nice notes and letters; it's so nice to hear from so many of you.

Toujours le même,
Dorothy Jewett Brigham, President

Jewett Family News

• The following news was received from C. Lincoln "Link" Jewett (14285):

As of 30 Jun 1988 I took "late retirement" after 50 years in the full time business world, as Executive Vice President of North American Realty Advisory Services, which is a management consulting firm specializing in the "recycling" and adaptive reuse of closed down industrial plants, warehouses, banks, hospitals, vacant land, and combinations thereof -- nationwide. The original corporate owner gets optimum dollar returns and the affected community get new jobs and tax revenues -- a win-win situation for all hands. Clients were mostly Fortune 1000 firms.

Daughter Laura Jewett (14330) is with the Democratic National Institute in Washington DC which, by invitation, assists public and private entities in emerging democracies to set up political parties, run elections, and associated activities. Her travel territory is Russia and the countries of the former Soviet Union.

Daughter Lisa Jewett (14329) is Arts and Publication Director of the Children's Aid Society in New York City and is on several boards and committees at Harvard University and Outward Bound, among others.

Truda and I have plans for adventures to Cuba followed by a trip on the Eastern Orient Express between Singapore and Bangkok and a voyage by boat up the Irrawaddy River to Mandalay. In between we'll be cruising on our boat SAM CAT II, attempting to play better golf, attempting to shoot more clay pigeons at skeet and trap, and attempting to keep up with house, auto and yard maintenance - including our own physiology.

• The following Ixil translation update was received from Sue and Dwight Jewett (16210):

As we look over the last few months, we are amazed at how God is moving in circumstances to bring about two key things we have been hoping for years to see happen.

In 1993 just before leaving for a year of home assignment, Dwight talked to a group of pastors in Chajul and asked them if they would be willing to begin reviewing and revising the New Testament books which had been translated up to that time. At that time they agreed that they would begin meeting for that purpose when we returned from the U.S. a year later.

While we were gone, minor disagreements arose among some of the pastors, and the plans for them to review the translated Scriptures fell by the wayside.

In 1995 Dwight asked each of the pastors if they would look for one person from their congregation who would be willing to serve on a committee of reviewers. Their job would be to read over the translated books of the New Testament, checking them for naturalness of style and clarity of expression in Ixil.

The pastors identified people in their congregation to serve on such a committee. And indeed early in 1996 a committee of eight began to review the little book of Philemon.

While the members of that committee were all very well intentioned, unfortunately some of them were not able to read and write Ixil at all, and others were barely literate. As a result, they soon became discouraged and gave up meeting together.

About that same time, Dwight "happened" to reestablish contact with a young man whom we had known from our earliest days in Chajul. He was a rambunctious four year old when we first moved to Chajul in 1977. In fact he was the younger son of our neighbor and, along with he older brother and cousins, used to play a noisy Ixil version of "cowboys and Indians" outside our front door.

The last we had heard of Romualdo (pronounced Rome-WALL-doe) was that he had gone to a church sponsored high school in the state capital about five hours by bus from Chajul. As Dwight and Romualdo chatted when they met again, he told Dwight that he was a seminary student in Guatemala City and that he would be interested in helping with the translation of the New Testament into his own language.

Unfortunately, his studies at the seminary kept Romualdo so busy he did not have much time to work with Dwight. But they were occasionally able to get together on a Saturday morning to study translation principles. And Romualdo got some practical experience in translation by doing a draft of the small books of II and III John.

In the fall of 1997, Romualdo finished his seminary studies and returned to Chajul. Because his denomination had given him a scholarship to study, he was required to serve his church in a leadership program, throughout the entire Ixil area after graduating from seminary. In addition, Romualdo has been helping Dwight with translation part-time this year.

One of his duties has been to oversee a committee of three fellow Ixil translators. They meet together one day a week to review and revise New Testament materials. As a native speaker of Chajul Ixil and one who knows his own culture and has studied Biblical culture and language, Romualdo has been a "dream come true" for Dwight as he leads his fellow Ixil translators in discussions of the best way to express key Biblical concepts in their language.

In January of this year, the denominational leaders asked Romualdo to move to another area of the country and minister there. Romualdo has always said that his desire is to minister among his own people even though, as a seminary graduate, he could undoubtedly earn more and enjoy greater prestige elsewhere.

After meeting with the leaders of his denomination, Romualdo has received their blessing to continue serving in Chajul. However, the commitment to continue to serve his own people has cost Romualdo the monthly salary which he was receiving from the denomination.

Just as all this has been going on, Wycliffe colleague Mark Willis has come to the final stages of his project of translating about one third of the Old Testament into Chajul Ixil. The reviewer's committee, under Romualdo's capable leadership, has asked that they be allowed to look over and endorse the Old Testament material also before it is published. We believe it is more that coincidental that just when the committee's work load is being doubled, Romualdo is available to dedicate almost 100 percent of his time to translation!

So in light of the committee's decision and Romualdo's increased involvement in the Chajul Ixil translation project, we are rejoicing over two key things the Lord has done in the last several months:

1) He has made Romualdo and three other very capable Ixil people available for and excited about service on the translation Reviewers Committee just at a crucial time in the translation project. And perhaps even more importantly . . .

2) He is more and more putting it into these reviewers' hearts to "take ownership" of the translation itself. The fact that they asked to be allowed to look over the Old Testament materials before publication is evidence of the fact.

It is clear to Dwight that the salary they earn as they work is no longer the primary motivation for their work. They are concerned more than ever before that God's word be available to their own people, and they are taking more and more responsibility to see that it happens. And once they have endorsed the translated Scriptures as their own, they are the ones who will be instrumental in promoting usage.

Tax deductible financial contributions to the Jewetts' work among the Ixil people should be clearly labeled "For the ministry of Dwight and Sue Jewett" and sent to: Wycliffe Bible Translators, PO Box 2727, Huntington Beach CA 92647. Personal letters can be sent to the Jewetts at: GU-277 ILV, PO Box 661447, Miami Springs FL 33266-1447 or e-mailed at Dwight_Jewett@sil.org.

New Gallery at Colonial Williamsburg Displays 18th-Century Silver Treasures for First Time

Williamsburg VA - Colonial Williamsburg's DeWitt Wallace Gallery opened its doors to the new Mary Jewett Gaiser (See Cluster 10362, p. 30) Silver Gallery 2 Oct 1998. The premier exhibition, entitled "Treasure Quest: Great Silver Collections from Colonial Williamsburg," will run through Dec 1999, the tricentennial of the City of Williamsburg. "Treasure Quest" will feature hundreds of items given to Colonial Williamsburg by major silver collectors including Mary Jewett Gaiser, John A. Hyman, Lowry Dale Kirby, and Harry and Alma Coon. The exhibition will include silver and early English silver plate (Sheffield plate), from flatware, skewers, mote spoons and marrow scoops to Scottish silver chalices or quaichs, dinnerware and teawares. Most of the items will be displayed to the public for the first time.

"The English made, used and enjoyed silver more than any other country in the world," said Colonial Williamsburg metals curator John Davis. "Silver provides an essential commentary on how people lived and how they chose to present themselves to society. Now, with nearly 1200 square feet of exhibition space in the new Gaiser Silver Gallery, we have the opportunity to explain to our visitors what made silver so desirable through the ages, how to 'read' a piece of silver, and how to identify silver marks and different types of silver plating."

Mary Jewett Gaiser, who left her silver collection to Colonial Williamsburg in 1993, began collecting silver during WWII. Much of her splendid collection of British cream jugs is featured in "Treasure Quest," as well as a magnificent epergne, with its elegantly tiered covered dishes and matching platter. Mrs. Gaiser's purchase of the centerpiece in 1943 was its salvation, as it was scheduled to be sent to England on a ship that was torpedoed at sea. "Treasure Quest" will highlight a number of special objects including:

- Richmond Cup - a superb silver-gilt racing cup produced for the Richmond races in Yorkshire in the 1760's and 1770's;
- Pelican Teapot - an extraordinary silver example from a group of small Scottish teapots whose body and shape derives from Chinese stoneware;
- Queen Anne Caster - a silver-gilt polygon caster engraved with the royal arms and the monogram of Queen Anne; and
- Jamestown Spoon - the first piece of silver given to Colonial Williamsburg, donated by the reverend W.A.R. Goodwin, the man who first proposed the reconstruction of 18th-century Williamsburg to John D. Rockefeller Jr.

The new gallery replaces an area previously devoted to furniture storage. Its completion necessitated major renovations, including the installation of curtain walls, glass and fire doors, room lighting, cases and carpeting.

The DeWitt Wallace Gallery displays the Colonial Williamsburg's permanent collection of English and American antiques. Entered through the reconstructed Public Hospital of 1773, the gallery is on Francis Street near Merchants Square in Williamsburg and is open 100 AM to 6 PM daily (closed Tuesdays).Admission is by Colonial Williamsburg Good Neighbor Card, Patriot's Pass, Colonist's Pass, Basic or Museums Ticket. Mr. and Mrs. Jewett (Mary Cooper, Wellesley 1923), their son, George Frederick Jewett, Jr., and their daughter, Margaret Jewett Greer (Wellesley 1951) gave Wellesley the Mary Cooper Jewett Art Building. They also gave the Margaret Weyerhaeuser Jewett Music Building with provisions in it for theater. Margaret Weyerhaeuser Jewett was Mr. Jewett's mother and a music student at Wellesley in the 1880's.[3]

The Jewett Chapel-Auditorium was a gift to the College of Idaho campus, Caldwell. It is named in honor of George Frederick Jewett and is believed to be the first successful building of its kind in the country to serve musical, dramatic, cultural and religious activities.[4]

A pipe organ was dedicated 27 Dec 1960 in the Cathedral of St. John in Spokane WA to serve as a memorial to the memory of George Frederick Jewett. The organ was a gift of his children.

Obituary: "On the cold, gray day of her funeral, the present generation of Spokane and Inland Northwest residents probably took little note of Mary Gaiser's passing. She was 95. She had outlived two husbands and most of the friends and associates of her lifetime. The imprint left by Mary Gaiser and her husbands, however, will forever be left on Spokane. And, her passing raises difficult questions about the future of good works funded by the wealthy and well-intentioned.

"Over the past 50 years, Mary Gaiser and the trust named for her first husband, George Frederick Jewett, gave Spokane and the Inland Northwest what today would add up to millions of dollars in gifts. Indeed, the Cathedral of St. John, perhaps Spokane's most dominant architectural landmark and the place where friends and family gathered to pay their last respects to Mary Gaiser, was largely built by Mary Cooper Jewett Gaiser and George F. Jewett's astounding charity.

"Beginning in the 1940's, Mary and George F. Jewett began donating part of the Jewett family fortune to finishing the cathedral. The gifts included:

- In 1943, $20,000 to pay off back debts at the cathedral, $16,000 to support construction, $50,000 of in-kind donations including a house near the cathedral that became the deanery.
- In 1953, $80,000 more to finish the construction.
- for 50 years, ongoing contributions to cathedral operations and projects totaling thousands more.

"And the cathedral was only one of dozens of institutions and causes benefitted from Gaiser-Jewett charitable giving. From the time she moved west from Wellesley College to Coeur d'Alene in the 1920's and continuing throughout the years she raised her children, the combined giving of Mary and David Gaiser (her second husband) and gifts from the George F. Jewett Foundation have been one of the top three private sources of gifts for worthwhile causes across the Inland Northwest.

"How big is the impact of the Gaiser/Jewett philanthropy? Consider this sampling:

- $50,000 to Whitman College in 1962;
- $200,000 to the Spokane YWCA in 1963;
- $100,000 to the University of Idaho in 1969;
- $225,000 to the Spokane Symphony in 1987.

"These number don't begin to count the other gifts in the $5000 to $25,000 range, everything from painting houses to Meals on Wheels.

"The Jewett Foundation, which was built from fortunes made in the timber industry across the Pacific Northwest, continues to this day. One of the most generous benefactors in the history of the Inland Northwest is gone Newsletter: "In 1917 when the river boats still plied the waters of Lake Coeur d'Alene, a stately home was built on the eastern shore. The Edward Rutledge Timber Company built the home for its manager, Huntington Taylor, and his family. In the early 1930's, Rutledge Timber merged with Potlatch Forest and Frederick Jewett became chairman of the board. For several years the Jewett family used the spacious house as their private residence. In 1940 the house became a staff house used for entertaining company officials and international guests. It was used as such until 1972. In June of 1978, Potlatch Forest granted the historic Jewett House to the city of Coeur d'Alene and its senior citizens, at which time it became a social and recreational center for seniors.

"The elegant three-story house is nestled against a pine covered hillside at the end of a drive. The grounds are beautifully landscaped with flower beds, grape arbor, shrubs and shade trees of many varieties. The spacious lawns are perfect for games, strolling or picnicking. A large covered barbecue grill has been permanently installed on the front lawn with picnic tables available, all of this against a backdrop of spectacular lake and mountain views. There is an elevator lift at the end of the front porch for those unable to use the steps.

"Upon entering the house, an open stairway graces the front entry which divides the living and dining rooms. Both of these rooms have large picture windows that frame the shimmering lake circled by forested mountains, thus giving visual pleasure for all seasons. The large beamed living room has a lovely fireplace and built-in bookcases to add to its comfort. It is furnished with a piano, organ, PA system, TV and VCR. A delightfully furnished sun parlor is just off the living room. It has a door giving access to the front porch which is a perfect place to sit and relax. A butler's pantry is just off the dining room making it convenient for serving potlucks or light refreshments. In the basement is a large poolroom with one table. The decor is turn of the century. There is a bridal dressing room on the second floor as well as the private quarters of the manager. The house is available for other uses such as weddings, family reunions, arts and crafts classes, club meetings, study groups, etc."[6]

Correction to Cluster 645

In Volume III, p. 154, of the History and Genealogy of the Jewetts of America, James Jewett (10207) was linked to James Jewett (645). Information was given that James Jewett (645) married Mary Pearson (638), the daughter of Lt. Stephen and Hannah (Jewett) Pearson (217), and that they had a son James Jewett (10207).

However, research done by Gordon L. Remington[7], reveals that James Jewett (10207) was the illegitimate son of James Jewett (645) and his first cousin Mary Pearson (638). Volume III states that James Jewett (10207) fathered the child and that James married Mary Pearson. However, no evidence of a marriage can be found. In fact, James was baptized in September of 1740 as "Pearson."[8] Mary Pearson had another illegitimate child in 1743, Ruth Duty Pearson.[9] In 1754 James Jewett (10207) chose Stephen Pearson (his grandfather) as his guardian.

Additional evidence is presented by Mr. Remington which reveals that James Jewett (10208) was the child of James Jewett's (10207) second wife and not his first wife as stated in Volume III. James (10207) and Alice were married 16 Oct 1789 as "Capt Jewett" and "Elienor Cochran."[10] The divorce petition dated 29 Apr 1789 from his first wife Elizabeth (Sheperd) Jewett mentions that "James has begotten three bastard children." The three children born prior to 1789 were James (10208) born 18 Dec 1783, Mary (10209) born 6 Aug 1785 and Hannah (10210) born 25 Apr 1787. A fourth child, Ruth Riggs (10211) born 26 Mar 1790, was not born until after the date of the divorce petition; so the three "bastard" children have to be James, Mary and Hannah.

A Letter from a Son to His Father

The following was an unidentified newspaper clipping dated 9 Jun 1944 found at the Home Front Cafe in Altamont NY:

M.H. Jewett, of the Works Transportation System, recently received an interesting letter from his son, M.H. Jewett, Jr., who is a member of the Flying Forces in England. The following is an extract from the letter:

"No one can picture all the things that go on over here. You begin to realize that only after you sit in a bomber seven miles up over Germany, with all the anti-aircraft and fighters the Luftwaffe can put up to knock you down. I've seen boys that I played cards with only about twelve hours before go down in flames, or seen parachutes floating down with the dirty rats shooting at the boys all the way down. The ones who make it down get to 'sweat out' to the end of the war in a Nazi prison camp.

"Yes, we only hope and pray that we can do the job right this time, even if it takes a little longer to do it. In the meantime, the more bonds you people buy back home and the more machines and equipment you can help get over here, the sooner we'll all be able to put them where it'll do the most good.

"When you play the record of my broadcast, you notice in the last part I referred to building the planes that can take it. Good old American workmanship will do the job every time. Our planes and equipment are the best in the world and we know it -- and here's how we know it: We know from practical experience. We used to hear factory representatives tell us what GE superchargers will take and won't take. We used to hear what our engines will stand and what our planes could fly without.

"It's one thing to be told your stuff is good. It's quite another to sit out over enemy territory nine hundred miles from home with a wing half off, with one engine shot out, and one running periodically. That's when you really have to have faith in God, faith in your equipment, and faith in yourself to make the decision as to whether you'll bail your crew out or try to make it back across the sea. But every time those good old engines pull you home -- that's when you're glad every rivet is doing its share, and that somebody back home is building them that way to get you home. I'd hate to fly in an airplane built by slave labor in Germany."

Does anyone know who M.H. Jewett and M.H. Jewett, Jr. are?

Heredity Hands Down Much More Than Eye Color

Ina Hughs, Knoxville News-Sentinel, 22 Jun 1988

Trying to explain what the word "heredity" means, one little kid put it this way: "Well, heredity means that if your grandfather didn't have any children, then your father wouldn't have any, and so wouldn't you . . . probably."

Years ago when I struggled through my required life-science course in school, the only part I found easy was the chapter on heredity. It was fun to work the brown-eye-blue-eye gene problems - which was dominant and what chances offspring would have of being BBs, Bbs, or bbs. I always pulled for brown eyes because the song has it right: They are beautiful, beautiful.

Unfortunately, in real life I didn't have any brown-eyed babies, even though the big-B brown of their father's eyes was one of the first things that caught my own boring blues. The jury is still out on what color our grandson's eyes will be because he's only six months old, but he's got at least two chances for browns in his gene pool, since his daddy is brown-eyed.

Which all goes to say, forces beyond our control determine not only what we look like, but who we are.

I have no "fathers" left to send a card to on Father's Day. I am myself now almost five years older than my father was when he died. My father-in-law lived to be in his 80's, but is no longer living.

As for my grandfather, he moved in with my family after becoming an invalid back when i was in elementary school. My strongest memory of him is of his getting propped up in bed at mealtimes, grandmother gently coaxing him to "try this" or "just another bite of that." It was hard to match him up with the giant of a man in the tiny black and white snapshot, holding my mother in her baptismal gown, or to believe that was really him in family movies, playing softball on the beach.

But now, all these years later, I look at my children and catch glimpses of the "fathers" on both sides of the family, replayed in them, one way or another:

The tilt of a head when deep in thought.
A card shark, a wordsmith.
The world's softest heart.

Too bad they never got to actually meet their grandfather on my side of the family or any of their great grandfathers. All of their male role models came from their dad and his side of the family, and they couldn't have gotten luckier there. When asked to write about "their favorite relative," the kids always chose their dad's father, with whom they spent most holidays and visited each summer. Say the word "granddad," and a thousand happy memories make them smile.

The other day I came across a picture of the three generations: my son, George, when he was about five, standing between his father and his grandfather. It was one of those Olan Mills moments when everyone gets all slicked up and grins a Snoopy-cartoon, get-this-over-quick grin. The physical resemblance is easy to spot, but the internal ones are what impress me. They are much more important.

I'm glad it works that way, that the people we love - like fathers and grandfathers - never really get out of the picture, even when they die. They are recycled. Even if there are no fathers, grandfathers or in-laws left to send cards to, we have them to thank every day for the good qualities they pass on to us by example and by teaching.

A much better way to honor them than just sending cards is to be sure their memory lives on through the telling of family stories and the keeping of picture albums. It's the only way my children will ever get to "meet" their grandfather, at least in this life. And they need to know him. Not just for sentimental reason, but because if they do not, they will not understand completely who they are.

Be it our birth families or families of choice, heredity has a lot more to do with us than just eye color. The lucky ones among us, like my own children, get fathers and grandfathers on both sides who are worth "being like."

Which reminds me of the little boy sitting in the barber's chair. "I want my hair cut just like my father's. With a hole on top."
