Reflections from Rowley

The 2015 Reunion is finished and I think all that attended enjoyed themselves. We only had about 35 members and those who did not bless us with their presence missed some great opportunities. Before the reunion I heard all the usual excuses as to why you wouldn't be there. It is too hot - the weather was perfect, there is nothing else to do in the area – FALSE, there is tons to do in the area, I have/don't have children in school (take your pick but it has nothing to do with the subject anyway. It boils done to the simple fact that the membership needs to support the JFA by attending functions and paying dues/publication fees. The first reunion I attended was in 1989 and it had so many members there (well over 200) that there were two sittings for the catered luncheon and there was difficulty taking the group photograph. This year we were able to get everyone in a standard photo in front of the church. Greg Jewett did a marvelous job of planning and executing and Esther took a ton of pictures which will show up everywhere. A special thanks to Philip and Julia who manned the registration desk. We were treated to several performances of the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry Reenactors which was very educational and much fun - the 54th was the first all Black Regiment and saw much action in the Civil War. The reenactors take on the role of specific soldiers and try to understand what they were all about. On Saturday afternoon we were entertained by a discussion and showing of Marta Mobley's movie "Amish Grace" about when a gunman killed five Amish children and injured five others in a Nickel Mines, Pennsylvania schoolhouse shooting in October of 2006. The world media attention rapidly turned from the tragic events to the extraordinary forgiveness demonstrated by the Amish community. Thanks to everyone who attended and made the Reunion happen and shame on those who didn't participate.

The book Early Jewett Gravestones in the Rowley Burial Ground by JFA Directors Barbara Shaw and Bernice (Bunny) Mansir (also known as the twins) was ready at the reunion. The book is almost 100 pages long and contains pictures of all of the 39 early Jewett gravestones in the "old" part of the Rowley Burial Ground as well as information linking the individuals to all the major reference sources available. Barbara and Bernice have spent a tremendous amount of time compiling and organizing this information in the book and it should be a good reference for anyone interested in researching these early Jewetts. You can purchase your copy by sending payment of $30.00 (includes $5.00 for postage) made out to the JFA to me at 114 West St, Medway, MA 02053 and I will get a copy to you.

We still have not heard from many members about payment of the publication fee / dues for calendar year 2015. Less than half of the people on the mailing list pay dues or publication fees each year. Please help us improve our collection percentage so that more people are paying for the services they receive. Printing and mailing the quarterlies is the biggest expense the JFA encounters.

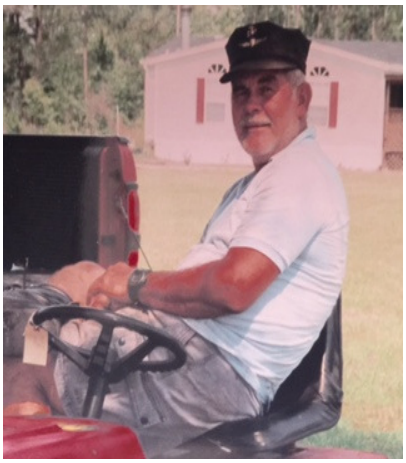
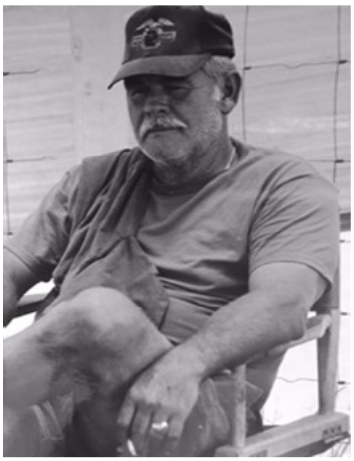
Douglas M Jewett Born July 3, 1943 Died October 18, 2014 (18,235)





This is not something I thought I would be having to do now, so soon, so unexpected. It has taken me 10 months to try and get this done. The obituary of my dad, Douglas Jewett. The hero of heroes, stubborn yet was giving to those in need. He was born June 3rd or July 3rd, 1943, depending what record book you are looking at in Lewiston, Oriente Cuba. He was 1 of 16 born to Clyde and Antonia Jewett. At the age of 17 he left Cuba because they broke relations with the US. At the age of 18 he joined the United States Marine Corps where he served 4 years and during that time served a tour in Vietnam.

In Dec 1964 he became a firefighter for the City of Miami Fire Dept. In Oct 1973 he became a firefighter for the Metro Dade Fire Dept. and retired in June 1998. In those years he became very well known for being a top notch firefighter. Saved many lives and trained many fellow firefighters and new recruits. He started the Urban Search and Rescue team for Dade County. He worked for the U.S. State Dept. training other firefighters in and around the world, the special rescue skills needed in large scale disasters such as earthquakes and plane crashes. He led the rescue team that went into Mexico during the quake of 1985. He flew the American Flag over his team's camp in Russia near the epicenter of the Armenian earthquake of 1988 (against instructions by the State Dept.) He and his team met with President Reagan upon return from Russia and were told not to touch him, or hand him anything. What did my dad do, he pulled a firefighter patch out of his pocket and handed it to the President causing a stir with the secret service. That, along with that "do what I feel" attitude, got him no longer working for the State Dept., but it didn't stop him from continuing to save lives and assist in many other disasters and train others in the US and other countries. That was my dad, didn't follow directions, but got the job done. He was respected by many, hated by some, loved by most. Instead of making enemies with the local leaders of countries he went to, he made friendships with them ,that kept him from getting into trouble. That firefighter legacy lives on in his son-in-law and three grandchildren.

He was real; he told it like it was. He was known by many and those who didn't get to actually meet him had heard of him. He would give the shirt off his back sometimes to others even before his own family. It was the many sacrifices he did years ago for others that were a part of his loss of life.

He said one thing anyone can count on is that he would continue to save lives, stepping on toes if he had to and continue to serve the city by choice, no matter how many times he got knocked down or a wall put up in front of him. His motto going into rescues and reason for not following the rules" I'd rather be tried by 12 then carried by 6". He said this is not a job for heroes because heroes end up dead. You need to know when to stop. Despite his words, he does not know when enough is enough that is why he didn't smoke occasionally but all the time, that is why he wants to keep digging when others want to stop. Some say he was extraordinarily courageous or extraordinarily crazy, or both, but if there was fear in his heart, it didn't show on his face. He was Metro Dade's Chesty Puller. He left many foot prints and will be so very much missed. I wish I had had more time to have been able to record and write down all his memories and stories, for now all I have are the many articles that have been written, and time that I did have with him.

He is survived by his wife, 3 daughters, 4 grandchildren, 10 brothers and sisters and many nieces and nephews.

National Jewett Family Reunion

Greg Jewett

The 34th National Jewett Family Reunion is now in the books of the history of our family but it will be long remembered by all who attended. There were many wonderful moments that brought emotions from laughter to tears. All left having learned something new about our Jewett family and with a new relationship with one of our cousins.

Where does one begin to describe such a wonderful event? Let's start at the beginning. The excitement started from the start at registration. Each family attending received the new book "Early Jewett Gravestones in the Rowley Burial Ground" by Barbara Shaw and Bernice Mansir. What a wonderful addition to our historical collection. It is like going through a walking tour of our founding fathers burial ground. It is full of color pictures of each gravestone and a map to find them. Barbara and Bernice have dedicated a lifetime to our family's burial ground and it is a treasure for them to share their knowledge. Their passion was contagious and it was a special bonus when they autographed each copy.

During registration, all also enjoyed a display of Jewett items. This included articles, books, and pictures of prominent Jewett members. Featured were Jewett's in the Civil War Lt. Erastus W. Jewett (medal of honor), Captain Richard H. L. Jewett (54th MA), and Lt. Charles Jewett, Jr. (54th MA); Jewett's in literature John P. Jewett (publisher), Sarah Orne Jewett (author), and Kenneth W. Jewett (author); Jewett's in industry Professor Frank Fanning Jewett (aluminum), Harry M. Jewett (Jewett automobile) and Sheldon & Savannah Jewett (Jewett bridges). Also displayed were a picture and movies of our featured guest speaker Marta M. Mobley (producer/writer).

The room was then electrified by the arrival of our Jewett family member, movie producer and reunion speaker Marta. Her positive attitude and outgoing personality is contagious and breathed extra life into our reunion. She is eager to share family stories and learn about our heritage. She met and started a friendship with each family member before being introduced at our opening ceremony.

At the opening ceremony, members were reminded that the statement of purpose recorded for our first reunion held in 1855 is still valid at this year's reunion, "the object of the meeting will be to give an opportunity for mutual conference, and joyful greetings, for renewing and strengthening the bands of common brotherhood, and in particular, to adopt measures for obtaining such historical facts as will perfect the genealogy of the Jewett Family." Can you imagine the discussions at the first reunion? John P. Jewett had just published his most famous work, Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" three years earlier and Dr. Charles Jewett was the most popular national temperance speaker (and abolitionist). We know they attended that first reunion. Did Dr. Charles bring his two sons Charles Jr. (age 24) and Richard (age 21) who later served in the 54th Massachusetts Colored Troops unit? Can you imagine the encouragement of conviction they must have received.

The first event on the venue was a tour of the beautiful Rowley Library. There the twins (Barbara Shaw and Bernice Mansir) donated a copy of their new book and Marta donated DVD copies of several of her movies. While at the library, the members were treated to the Special Collections room where a large portrait of Admiral David Jewett which was donated to the Jewett Family is on permanent loan to the library and a pendent with the Jewett crest is also on display. Library Director, Pamela Jacobson, provided a tour of the library. The next day, the Jewett display at registration was moved to the library for all library patrons to enjoy.

From the air conditioned library, the family moved to the heat of the outdoors and the Jewett Burial Ground. The memorial service included a brief history of our founding brothers Joseph and Maximilian Jewett, the singing of the National Anthem and Amazing Grace, and the reading of the Jewett Boulder inscription. The highlight of the ceremony was the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, Company A Re-enactors serving as the honor guard presenting our National Colors and performing a gun salute to honor our ancestors.

During the Civil War, the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Regiment became the Union Army's first formally organized unit made up of free black men. The valor these men displayed, led to the forming of other such units. Among their ranks was Sergeant William Harvey Carney who was the first African American to be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. Captain Richard H. L. Jewett and Lieutenant Charles Jewett, Jr. served as white officers in the 54th MA.

Kathy Sutherby owner of the Village Pancake House opened her doors after her normal business hours to host a special dinner for the Jewett Family and their 54th Massachusetts guests. The Village Pancake house is the home of Abraham Jewett built in circa 1660. Abraham Jewett was the nephew of Maximilian and Joseph Jewett and came to the new colony with his uncles and the rest of the Rev. Ezekiel Rogers group. After a delicious meal of generous proportions, the men of the 54th MA provided a wonderful discussion about their unit and their significance in our county's history. The 54th MA was made famous by the movie "Glory" starring Matthew Broderick, Cary Elwes, Morgan Freeman and Denzel Washington. In the movie the first weapons distributed to the troops was performed by the actor Morgan Freeman. Captain Richard H. L. Jewett was the person who historically distributed the first weapons to the troops. The Jewett family continued its fight for freedom with this historic moment.

The excitement of the reunion continued with our family member and movie producer Marta M. Mobley giving an inspirational talk. Marta has an impressive resume. In twenty years she has worked on over 65 independent film and television projects, developing or producing more than 40 films, 4 reality series and 2 drama series. Her most famous film is "Amish Grace" produced for Lifetime Television. This movie is the highest rated movie in Lifetime's ten year history and winner of the Christopher Award. In addition she produced "Secrets in the Walls" for Lifetime Television and three films for The Hallmark Channel, "Sea Harbor", "Mrs. Washington Goes to Smith" and "Citizen Jane." The most impressive attribute of Marta is her recent quest to make inspirational and positive films. Her quest can best be described in her own words:

> "My journey began 12 years ago after my first child was born and became a mother. As a successful media producer who helped to create some of the most gratuitously violent and degrading movies of all time, I was not aware of how the media I created might influence other people's lives, especially my own children's.
> Along my journey I came to realize–as I watched and experienced media from my children's perspectives–how scary and unhealthy the bulk of our current media choices really are. That so many of the negative role models my children were watching on TV and in movies and reading in books, were not ones I would want them to emulate. The journey I have taken as media producer, mother, positive media advocate and now a writer, has inspired me to create what I believe are compelling stories with colorful characters who inspire and offer positive role models of what I would wish not only my children will be, but also all God's children will be."

Thank you Marta for your inspirational talk.

Following Marta's wonderful talk, the Jewett Family meeting was held including the singing of "Our Family Pledge" and "The Jewett's Patriotic Song." No one broke the camera as the members gathered for a group photo in the front of the First Congregational Church of Rowley. Following a light lunch, all went over for a tour of the Rowley Historical Society's Platts Bradstreet House. Many Jewett family artifacts are on display in this house and barn. The house is one of the oldest original houses in Rowley.

The day concluded with the showing of the movie "Amish Grace" in the Community Room of the Rowley Library. We took advantage of their new 80 inch screen TV and air conditioning. Marta provided an introduction to the film and answered questions afterwards. It is an inspirational movie about forgiveness based on a true story. It is recommended to all. At the conclusion of the movie, there was not a dry eye in the room. The opportunity to ask questions of the producer was a special treat.

The Jewett Family Reunion concluded with a worship service on Sunday morning at the First Congregational Church of Rowley. Rev. Bob Hagopian gave an inspirational message. It was such an appropriate way to end the reunion, worshipping with the descendants of Rev. Ezekiel Rogers congregation in the church building that Mark R. Jewett built in 1842.

Good-byes and thank you were passed around before the Jewett family dispersed to continue their impact on America. Some went directly home but some took advantage of the Boston area and took in a baseball game in one of the most famous ballparks in the country. Mark your calendars for our next reunion. If you did not attend, you missed something special.

Many thanks are due many people. Our wonderful cousin Marta M. Mobley, Ted Loranz our JFA president, Esther Jewett for her photography, Barbara Shaw and Bernice Mansir for their new book, Johanna Jennings for sharing her musical talent, Rev. Bob Hagopian and the First Congregational Church for their hospitality, Joe Zellner and the 54th Massachusetts, Pamela Jacobson and the Rowley Library, Susan Hazen and the Rowley Historical Society, Kathy Sutherby of the Village Pancake House, Paula Simpson of Carry Out Café, and Philip Jewett and Julia Zelinsky for handling registration.

See you in five years for our next reunion in 2020. Mark your calendars!

A Connection to the Mass. 54th

As noted earlier, a group of the re-enactors from the Massachusetts 54th Volunteer Infantry was present at the reunion to provide a color guard for the cemetery ceremony, and were then guests at the dinner that evening where a discussion of the Mass. 54th and Civil War practices in general took place. The photo at left shows 1st Sgt. Gerard Grimes during a demonstration of the 5 steps required to load and fire a standard Civil war rifle. As noted by members of the re-enactment group when the time came for the regiment to actually receive their weapons, it was Lt. Richard H. L. Jewett who actually dispensed the rifles to the men of the 54th.

1st Sgt. Gerard Grimes is a Boston school teacher and a member of the Civil war reenactment group making up Company A of the Mass. 54th, based in the Boston area. Each of the members of the group represents a specific member of the Mass. 54th. In the case of Sgt. Grimes, the person he represents Oliver Hazard. The representation of Oliver Hazard is of highly relevant to Sgt. Grimes, as he is an actual descendant of Mr. Hazard. It was an honor to have a descendant of one of the members of the Mass. 54th that actually served under Lt. R.H.L. Jewett in attendance.

In regards to the Mass. 54th, their most famous battle was the attack on Fort Wagner, as dramatized in the movie "Glory". However, Oliver and his brother Nahum were not amongst the unit at that time. They enlisted after the Battle of Fort Wagner, when the Mass. 54th needed to replenish the positions opened up due to the resulting casualties. Instead the brothers both fought in the Battle of Olustee, Florida and at Honey Hill, South Carolina. During the battle of Olustee, Oliver was wounded in the leg, and he was on a train of wounded men which the men of the 54th pulled to Jacksonville, Florida, after it broke down. Oliver was wounded because the 54th didn't get the call to retreat, and they even ran out of bullets. After the war ended, Oliver got married to Emeline Messer and moved to Leominster. Oliver was disabled but he still worked in his wife's laundry. Oliver was honored by the Leominster Historical Society with a statue in Carter Park in 1998.

Discovering Unknown Cousins

Family reunions provide a wonderful opportunity to become reacquainted with distant relatives, get to know new additions to the family, and perhaps to meet relatives or cousins that you did not know even existed. While the recently concluded Jewett Family of America national reunion provided an opportunity for all of these, I would like to focus on the discovery of unknown relatives. Among the reunion attendees was Marta Mobley, also a featured presenter during the reunion. Casual conversations with her during the reunion revealed her recent discovery of her Jewett heritage. Marta grew up in Nebraska, and eventually left to attend college in California, leaving the rest of the family back in the Midwest. The primary genealogist in Marta's family was her mother, Phyllis Jeanne Jewett. Marta related that he mother would often write up to 20 letters a week, keeping in touch with various relatives and distant cousins. However, her mother never really shared her findings with anyone, keeping her work more or less as a personal hobby. Following her passing the family back in the Midwest oversaw the disposition of the estate while Marta continued to reside in California. About 20 years later Marta's sister, Kathy Mobley, died suddenly, and Marta returned to help settle the estate. To Marta's surprise, her sister had a storage locker that she had been renting for the past 20 years. On opening the storage locker Marta found it filled with boxes upon boxes of her mother's genealogy research and correspondence.

After transferring all of the records back to her home in California, Marta began going through the boxes and digitizing the material. Among the items Marta discovered in the collection were past copies of the Jewett Family of America newsletters. It was the discovery of the newsletters that eventually put her in touch with Greg Jewett and brought her to the national reunion. In addition to meeting attendees from various branches of the family, Marta also discovered somewhat more closely related cousins. It turns out that among the boxes of old correspondence was a stack of letters received from Barbara Jewett in Dubuque, Iowa, my mother. While I knew that my mother was heavily involved in genealogy and trying to maintain links to all the varied lines on each side of the family; Jewett, O'Brien, Guns and Eisbach, I did not have a close connection to it before she died, and I acquired all of her material. Unlike Marta's mother, my mother retained only a small fraction of the correspondences from her various contacts, so I remain unfamiliar with the previous network of genealogy contacts my mother maintained.

The connection between our family lines, as shown on the next page, goes back to Abel Jewett in Johnstown, Ohio. I am descended from his son Nathan Jewett, who settled in Monmouth, Iowa (between Dubuque and Davenport), while Marta is descended from another son Timothy Jewett, who relocated to Indianola, Iowa (south of Des Moines).

While that might seem to be a singular lucky encounter, Marta and I also met up with Robert Jewett from Virginia, another descendent of Abel Jewett. Along with other Revolutionary War veterans, Abel was later given land in Johnstown, Ohio, where he and his wife Sarah Dwinnel lived and raised several children, who led to the many Jewett descendents from the Midwest, including the three of us. If any readers want to visit Johnstown to see Abel's headstone, be sure to also visit the Hot Spot Coffee Shop and have some delicious food at Route 62 Barbeque.

It just goes to show, you never know who you will run into at a family reunion.
